Emerald Ice - Hockey in Seattle from 1915 to 1975

Appendix B - The City Hockey League

Seattle has a long history of strong amateur hockey leagues, starting right after the opening of the Civic Arena in the fall of 1928. Various leagues and teams played on the Arena ice - college fraternities, adults and junior leaguers called the building home for decades.

Perhaps the most successful amateur circuit in Seattle was the City Hockey League. Officially founded in 1932 (previous incarnations had gone by various names, including the Puget Sound Hockey League) the City League provided high level amateur hockey to fans for a decade, eventually giving way to the Pacific Coast Hockey League in the fall of 1944.

Two of the most important figures in Seattle hockey laced up for the City League - PCHL and WHL President Al Leader and Vince Abbey, a part-owner of the Totems from 1958-75 and the man who made the first serious attempt to bring the NHL to Seattle.

While the City League did get some mention in the press, statistical information is almost impossible to come by and often different sources report conflicting information. The best I can provide is a list of the league champions over the years as was originally published in the Official Rules and Records of the Amateur Hockey Association of the United States 1945-46.
